Impeached Governor's Attorneys Are Preparing His Case for Trial.—
Both Men Occupy Capital
Offices Today.

Albany, New York, Aug. 16.—All negotiations toward having the courts decided who is the governor of New York were declared off today. For the third consecutive day William Sulzer the impeached governor and Martin H. Glynn who was elected lieutenant governor, occupied offices in the capitol, each claiming to be the chief executive. Indications were that the dead lock would last until the meeting of the legislature next Tuesday if not longer.

Neither claimant endeavored to interfere in any way with the other. Each seemed to be marking time while waiting for the other to take the offensive.

Breach is complete. The breach between Sulzer and Glynn is complete and there will be no further conferences between their counsel so far as known on the question of submitting the controversy to the court. D. Cady Herrick Sulzer's chief counsel in so announcing today said that he did not expect to make public any plans of lawyers for the impeached executive.

"We are preparing our cases for trial," Mr. Herrick said. Interviewers asked Herrick what the next move would be.

"I don't know that there will be a next move," he replied.

Last night was the worst passed by Mrs. Sulzer since she became ill of a nervous disorder several days ago, but her conditions this morning was less alarming according to bulletins issued by the attending physicians. A bulletin prepared by Dr. Abrams, a New York specialist, says:

"I arrived at the bedside at one o'clock this morning. Mrs. Sulzer's condition was as follows: Temperature and pulse increasing. She complains of headache and mental depression, and had two fainting spells. She sleeps restlessly and the little sleep was induced by sedatives."

New York's two governors after the epistolary clash of yesterday continued today with increased bitterness in their conflict for the sole possession of the chief executive's chair and functions.

The proposal of William Sulzer the impeached governor, that he and his rival lay their respective claims before the court for a speedy settlement came to grief last night. Lieutenant Governor Glynn who claims that he is acting governor by virtue of Sulzer's impeachment notified Mr. Sulzer that he had no intention of asking any court to decide the question.

Hoped for Settlement.

Mr. Glynn's refusal places the entire situation at sea again. Indications late yesterday afternoon were that there would be an amicable adjustment. Mr. Sulzer's lawyers conferred with Mr. Glynn's lawyers regarding possible methods of taking the issue into court and it was generally expected that a way of doing this could be devised. Mr. Glynn's refusal to arbitrate was a distinct surprise to Mr. Sulzer's friends.

RAIN OFFERS SOME RELIEF IN KANSAS;
HOT IN WISCONSIN

Parched Ground Drinks Up Showers
While Excessive Heat Continues
Throughout Southwest.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 16.—Heavy showers last night and early today relieved conditions in parts of the heart and drought stricken regions of Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma, but the rains were far from general and in most instances inadequate. In one section it is said only a twenty-four hour soaking rain can alleviate the suffering entirely.

Where wells and streams are dry a heavy precipitation is regarded necessary to replace the exhausted water supply. Temperature that for twelve days has hovered above the one hundred mark, fell today in southern Kansas and northern Oklahoma because of showers and clouds but according to the weather bureau there evidences of a 13th day of extreme heat generally over the three states.

Cyclone in Minnesota.

Duluth, Minn., Aug. 15.—A "twister" struck near this city early today. It was first noted near the dumping grounds. After passing over Trout Lake it tore off a clump of trees on the east shore. At Gilbert a hail storm accompanied by a high wind broke windows. At Virginia the storm was accompanied by heavy hail and wind, which broke windows and knocked off brick chimneys. At Eveleth a severe electrical storm accompanied by hail and a high wind did considerable damage.

Thresh by Moonlight.

La Crosse, Aug. 16.—Moonlight threshing was the rule on the big farms about La Crosse, both on the Wisconsin and Minnesota side of the river last night. Threshing crews were unable to work in the daytime since Wednesday on account of the intense heat, so men and teams took to the bunks during the hot portion of the day and early last evening when the moon came out brightly and a cooling breeze swept over the farms the forces resumed work and continued throughout the night.

Heat Prostrations.

La Crosse, Aug. 16.—Three prostrations from the extreme heat occurred here today, one of which may result fatally. The official temperature was 95, but in the brick paved district thermometers went above 100 and proved the most oppressive of the summer.

Four at Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, Aug. 16.—Four prostrations from the heat were reported by the police department today. None of the list was "Ted" Murphy, the boxing promoter.

Losses in Canada.

Some Sensational Testimony.

Washington, Aug. 16.—H. H. McMichael, former chief page of the National Association of Manufacturers, testified before the house lobby committee that he was now being paid a weekly salary of $85, $75 by the New York World, which printed the original Mulhall charges.

A Verbal Agreement.

"I am under a verbal agreement," he said, "to write a story about Twenty Years in a House Employee after the lobby investigation was over."

"And you receive $75 a week?"

"Didn't you tell me you were to receive the salary for corroborating Mulhall?"

"Didn't you tell me that if Representative McDermott would pay you $325 he owed you that you would not say a word to hurt him?"

McMichael's sensational testimony which accused McDermott of having received some $7,000 of a corruption fund raised by local power brokers to defeat a federal loan shark law, has already resulted in the subpoena of four capitol pawn brokers and the committee intends to follow the lead.

McMichael met today.

DULUTH MILLIONAIRE
BELIEVED MURDERED

Ninety Thousand Dollars Accident
Insurance Involved in Death of John McAlpine.

Duluth, Minn., Aug. 17.—Ninety thousand accident insurance money is involved in the case of the mysterious death of John McAlpine of Duluth, millionaire lumberman whose body was found in the basement of his home yesterday morning.

Chief of Police Tryer today testified to the theory of murder. W. B. Lee private detective pronounces his belief that the man was murdered while he was in the house.

Mr. McAlpine was accidentally shot when he fell over a pipe with an automatic pistol which he carried in his hand and if not that a burglar did the killing. A basement window was open enough to permit a human body to squeeze through which lends strength to the later supposition. An inquest will be held late today.

Mr. McAlpine arrived home about midnight. Others in the house at the time were Mrs. McAlpine, Mr. and Mrs. Dale McAlpine and a maid. Mr. John McAlpine was seated at a table about a m. and Mrs. McAlpine asked him why he did not retire. "I am waiting for the kids to come in," he replied.

At 2:35 Mrs. McAlpine missed her husband and called Dale who accompanied by his mother went to the basement and found John McAlpine dead on the floor.

According to the police Mrs. John McAlpine today turned abruptly from the murder or accident theory and declared her husband had committed suicide. According to the story told by her, young John McAlpine found John McAlpine face downward near the furnace. A window opening into the basement told him he had been removed but not set clear of the opening. There was sufficient space however for a person to enter.

"It seems to me unwise," declared Senator Reed, "that with business depressed because of the fact that it is waiting for this bill to pass we should stop to discuss humming birds."

BRITISH COUNTRIES

Police May Also Follow Example.—
"Cat and Mouse" Law Extremely Unpopular.—James
Bell Dead.

London, Aug. 16.—The British Medical Association, at its annual meeting, seriously debated the advisability of organizing as a labor union.

Recently the official organ of the association was called for help in the face of a large number of practitioners a quick, inasmuch as, under a recent decision of the British courts, the funds of a labor union cannot be touched for such damages, the doctors felt that the organization of their association into a labor union would not be without certain advantages.

The British Medical Association in its recent strike against the provisions of the compulsory state insurance act emulated the tactics of labor unionists, but in spite of the reputed higher mentality of its members, it suffered defeat on account of its humber exemplars have.

Following in the footsteps of the doctors, the police are contemplating the formation of a labor union to be called the police union of Policemen. Letters appear every week in the police organ, citing grievances and suggesting the formation of a union as the first step to have their correctives.

The chief demand is for a maximum police salary of ten dollars a week, and one correspondent suggests that, as the police have to enforce fair play in the labor disputes of others, they should have little difficulty in enforcing their own demands. One writer hinted that it might go badly with the public if the police struck for their rights. One of the chief workers of the police union, a suffragette whose activities have added greatly to their overtime, for which they get no extra pay. Recently the force has been increased in order to give longer vacations, but the men feel that their lot is still cast in hard places.

James R. Bell Dead.

James R. Bell, the original of Kipling's "Bridge Builder," is dead at his home here.

Mr. Bell was a sad reminder of how the castiron rules of the Indian civil service hamper the efficiency of some of its best members, for he was an arbitrarily retired at the age of 55. He was in excellent health, in the midst of some of his best achievements and willing and anxious to go on with his work, when the order came from a family of engineers.

After his retirement Mr. Bell passed nearly every winter in India or China, where his services as a consulting engineer were welcomed.

He was from a family of engineers, being the grandson of James Brunner, who floated the "Great Britain," then the largest steamer in the world, when she stranded in Dundrum Bay on her last voyage across the Atlantic. Mr. Bell built some of the greatest bridges in India. Some of these structures are great engineering feats, for the designs have to provide for inundations and changes in the planes of the treacherous rivers they span.

INTERESTING LETTER FROM DOCTOR WOODS

J. T. Fitchett Receives Letter From London Which Is Interesting Reading.

J. T. Fitchett has received a letter from Dr. Edward Woods who is at present in London, which gives a most interesting pen picture of the big hospitals in that city. Dr. Woods writes as follows in part:

From Doc "Woods," London.
Dr. Thomas and family have just returned to London and next Wednesday the 16th, the International Medical Congress opens. Several thousand physicians have registered so far, and they are coming in from all directions. We expect to enjoy it. I have been doing some good work here in the hospitals. Being here early, I have been welcomed very cordially by the surgeons operating and shown every attention possible. From now on there will be so many that I shall probably be obliged to retire to the amphitheatre, instead of putting on cap and gown and standing by the side of the surgeon operating. Have been especially favored by Sir W. Arbuthnot Lane, one of the greatest surgeons here, who has given me unusual opportunity to see him operate and his clinics are very large. He operates at Gray's Hospital, which is connected with the London University where I studied 23 years ago. Penhagony will be interested to know that Thomas Gray for whom the hospital is named and at whose "sole costs and charges" it was founded in 1720, was a printer and a publisher of books. It is neither the oldest nor the largest. The oldest is St. Bartholomew's, founded in 1123 in fulfillment of a vow made in Rome during illness by Rahere, a Canon Regular of St. Austin, who also founded the priory of St. Bartholomew. It has always been a hospital for the sick, and at the present time has 150 beds for in-patients and with the out-patient department treats about 150,000 patients every year. Henry, the discovery of the circulation of blood was physician of this hospital from 1599 to 1663. Have attended some very fine clinics here also. This hospital has one very fine feature—a convalescent hospital in Kent which accommodates 70 patients. When you know that the hospital is absolutely free for poor people only, (there are no private rooms, only wards) you will see how low this is. A patient able to leave the hospital, but not really well, is sent to this department of the hospital until he has fully recovered, when, if he had been obliged to return to his own home, his recovery might have been retarded. The largest hospital is The London Hospital with 322 beds, where over 250,000 are treated each year. Another large hospital is St. Thomas. In both, I have seen fine work. These hospitals all are free for the physicians and surgeons give their services, and are men of broad reputation. I am told that there are in all about 300 such hospitals. Taking these facts into consideration, together with the sanitary precautions taken by the city (the streets are flushed each night with an antiseptic solution, and the gutters several times daily) it is no wonder that London has the lowest death rate of any city in the world. I have learned much on this trip. I am glad to say. Have spun this out to an unconscious length but you can read it by installments. Sorry to hear of the intense heat. Hope you and yours will keep well. We sail from Liverpool the 19th so you can not answer this.

GATHERS FACTS IN MEXICO FOR WILSON

(c)—Harris & Ewing.

Dr. William Bayard Hale.

Dr. William Bayard Hale, the journalist and official biographer of President Wilson, is in Mexico gathering information for the president. Dr. Hale is an authority on Mexican affairs and it is said that the president relies to a great extent on his confidential reports. While Lind is the president's personal representative it is said that the real information the president gets comes from Dr. Hale.

Right-Handed Plants.

That there are right-handed plants and left-handed plants has been reported to the Cambridge (England) Philosophical society by R. H. Compton. In an examination of eight varieties of two-rowed barley the first leaf was found to twist to the left in 58 per cent of more than 12,000 seedlings, and an excess of left-handed growth was found also in millet and in oats. In corn there seemed to be no marked tendency either way. No evidence of hereditary peculiarity appears to have been obtained and no special significance of the results is pointed out.

When the traveling bag becomes dirty wash the bag well with tepid water and a little soap. After it is dry put a little oxalic acid into a cup of hot water and wipe the bag well with a soft rag dipped in the acid. When dry brush the bag with white of an egg and you will be surprised to see how new it looks.

A GREAT SUCCESS

Over a Hundred Boys and Girls Attending Morning Swimming Lessons at Island Beach.

Probably the most successful part of the play ground work of the year is the swimming classes which were started a month ago and since that time the attendance has grown until over a hundred boys take their plunge every other morning at the Boys starting in hundred yard swimming race from the diving tower at the Goose Island swimming beach.

Goose Island swimming beach. All members of the class are rapidly becoming experts at the water sports and the last time made at the water meet two weeks ago demonstrates the advantage of giving the boys a chance to learn swimming.

Next year it is the plan of Director Finlay to have bath houses and lockers erected at the island and swimming equipment, including a floating barge, plus several spring boards and a higher tower. The girls and boys will have their set time for swimming and the beach will run under a strict schedule.

At the present time the Goose Island beach is proving the most popular swimming place because of the twelve foot tower that the directors erected. Every evening from twenty to a hundred boys report here for an evening swim.

"SEPT. MORN" MUST
WEAR MORE CLOTHES

Postmaster Valentine Gives Opinion on Sending Miss September Morn Through Mails.

According to Postmaster C. L. Valentine, "Miss September Morn," as an advertisement, intended to attract attention because of its suggestiveness, is not acceptable to the post office service. "It is the rule in every post office that all nude pictures or any that tend to attract attention because of the boldness, shall not be sent through the mails, and are to be thrown out," stated Mr. Valentine when asked the rules governing the sending of "Miss September Morn" through the mails.

In Milwaukee, "Miss September Morn" was told to go and get some clothes on, and at La Crosse the postmaster told her to wear at least an envelope before she could pass through the mails. If "Miss Morn" appears as a real lady, intending to be taken seriously by the artists' imagination, and is covered by a non-transparent covering it is probable that she would be able to travel in the mails but there was no question of her being sent through the mails.

PRESENTS LIBRARY
SOLDIERS' LETTERS

E. B. Quiner of Madison Donates Valuable Scrap Book to Wisconsin Historical Library.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Aug. 16.—E. B. Quiner of this city, private secretary to Gov. Alexander W. Randall, who was the war governor of Wisconsin during 1890-91, and also to Governor Harvey, who succeeded Governor Randall, recently presented to the Wisconsin Historical Library a scrap book of letters written by Wisconsin soldiers during the war. During the time Mr. Quiner subscribed for every paper published in the state and from these papers his daughters clipped the letters written by the soldiers to their families. The book is one of the rare documents of the collection. Two of Mr. Quiner's daughters also went as nurses to the soldiers at Memphis, Tenn., giving them comfort, free, and Mr. Quiner paying their entire expenses.

MIDSUMMER DANCE PLEASURES
FORTY COUPLES LAST EVENING

Fully forty couples enjoyed the mid-summer dance which was held at the East Side Old Fellows hall last evening. The weather man failed to allow any breeze to enter the hall or any place else, and consequently many of the young people noticed the heat considerably before the party was brought to an end. The party was given by Arthur Harbison and Carrie Keller. Miss McGinley was at the piano, and because of the heat, it was necessary to extend the time between dances, and to have two trap drummers on hand. The party was a success.

WILL PRESENT A PAPER
AT HORTICULTURAL MEET

M. S. Kellogg left today for Waukegan where he will attend the Grand Lodge of the Good Templars. From there he goes to attend the summer meeting of the State Horticultural Society, August 20, 21, when he will read a paper on "The River-Bearing Strawberry," of whose cultivation he has made a study. Mr. Kellogg has a quarter of an acre planted with these strawberries and has been testing them for the last eight years. The vines can be made to bear at any time during the growing season by plucking off the blossoms until about thirty days before the fruit is desired. He has vines that are bearing at the present time.

CLAM DIGGERS RETURNING HOME AFTER LONG SEASON

Hundreds of clam-diggers, who have been pitching their tents on the banks of the Rock between Janesville and Beloit, are returning home after a hard season's work. Some report a successful year, while others failed disastrously. This section of the Rock seems to be a profitable place for clam-fishing. Many are making their homes along this spot for the purpose of hunting clams and for spending an outing. The place is ideal for camping, especially on the south bank.

EMPEROR MUST FIGHT

BEQUEATHED TO HIM

Widow of Herman Knorr, Who Willed Fortune to His Majesty, Will Fight Case in Courts.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Berlin, August 16.—Emperor William will not receive without a fight his inheritance of $750,000 from Herman Knorr, the patriotic wood-dealer of Kauschwitz, whose deceased after bequeathing to his Majesty practically his entire estate was reported last week.

"The widow, who asserts that much of Knorr's wealth was due to success in speculation, financed by the money she brought to him as her dowry, will contest the will which assigns to her merely the amount of the original dowry and an annuity of $20,000. All the rest of the estate goes to the Emperor, 'to be used in strengthening the army and navy.'"

First estimates gave the value of the estate at only $250,000. But when Knorr had been assessed for taxes, but later investigation showed that a far larger amount had been covered up, to the incidental profit of his royal residence, legacies. The widow, who after sixteen years of troubled married life finds the provisions of the will exceptionally hard, will be assisted in her fight by her near and needy relatives of her husband, who do not agree with the Emperor's will. The Emperor's will, of which representatives of the government and the patriotic parties made so much in the recent debate in the Reichstag on the military bill, will be interesting in this connection to note whether the authorities will revise, in this case, the decision handed down a few months ago in a case which related to the legacy of Charlotteburg. THAT UMPIRE.
It's true he often calls 'em wrong and gives the game away. He often makes us yearn to pull his nose. Oh, frequently his vision's punk and almost every day. He wins our hate and yet do you suppose—
Do you suppose because the ump, as they call him, is not a little bull or two. Will sometimes make a little bull or two. Do you suppose because he hands the other bunch a run. We think he should be shot?

... You bet we do!
Whether or not Connie Mack grabs the pennant this season—and there's darn little doubt about it—he says he's sure for certain that he has next year's bunting safely tucked away and put on ice. Cleveland has been regarded as a possible pennant contender and Connie recently declared that if Cleveland ever wanted to win a pennant they'd better hurry up and do it this season because they surely wouldn't have the ghost of a chance in 1914. With this year's pennant practically cinched, Connie comes out and says that Athletics will repeat next year with ease, if not easier. And the reason seems to be that Cornelius has and he is pursuing it carefully along. He says that Bush, Shawkey, Brown and Houck are the best things in the way of youthful pitching material in the country. And adds that they are going to do some great things in the season to come.

WESTERN CHESS TOURNEY OPENED IN CHICAGO

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

FIGHT FOR PENNANT TO BE REMARKABLE SAYS FRANK CHANCE

Assumes That Giants and Athletics Will Be Contenders—Winning Club Will Get Early Breaks.

New York, August 16.—Basing his prediction on the assumption that the Giants and Athletics will be the contenders, Frank Chance forecasts a remarkable struggle for world's championship pennant this autumn.

Extremes of the two leagues appear to be very evenly matched, said Chance, in discussing the teams, "and I look for a very close, exciting series. In my opinion the winning team will be the one that gets the early 'break' in the play. You can eliminate the 'breaks' in baseball, and in a series as important and as short as the world's championship it has always proved a very prominent factor. In all the series in which I have taken part, it has always been present. Sometimes the 'breaks' came our way and then again it helped the other fellows, but I never knew the time when it didn't play a leading part."

For that very reason I have always held that a seven-game series between two clubs of the calibre of the National and American League pennant winners was not as decisive as it should be. Fully fifteen games would be necessary, to my mind, to decide positively which was the better club. Unfortunately, however, such a long drawn out series would fail to hold interest coming at the end of a seven months' season eighty per cent of the fans of the two cities would lose interest in the play before the completion of the play. It has been suggested that playing several of the games in cities other than those directly interested might solve this problem. I have no doubt that Pittsburgh, Chicago and Washington would turn out big crowds for one game each, even though the Athletics and Giants were the contenders. It's a difficult problem to please both player and spectator, but I believe that eventually a more satisfactory method will be evolved for deciding the world's championship.

World's Series "Rubber"
Should the New York and Philadelphia clubs win their respective league pennants, the world's series of 1913 will be in the nature of a "rubber." In present circumstances a world's championship title won at the expense of the other. The Giants quickly dropped the championship aspiration of the Athletics in their initial meeting of 1903. Under the direction of McGraw the New York team on four of the five games played all of which were shut-outs. Six years later Connie Mack secured his revenge for the Athletics won four out of the six games from the Giants.

Of the players who engaged in the series of 1905, Bender, Plank, Davis and Murphy are still enrolled with the Athletics, although the latter two are no longer in the regular line-up. Mathewson and Wilkie are the only Giants of those days who still wear the New York uniform. It is a singular feature of the game that Bender and Mathewson, the respective club heroes of 1905, are still past masters of the art of pitching eight years after their initial clash and may face each other during the play next October, unless an eleventh-hour rush by one of the other league clubs upsets the prediction of the baseball prophets. To date the world's series has been an excellent financial proposition for the New York and Philadelphia clubs and players. The two series netted the club owners $214,387.47 and the players $55,448.81.

Plea for Coaching Course.
In discussing the freshman athletic problem at Harvard William F. Garrison, former graduate athletic treasurer, makes another plea for an athletic coaching course for those students who are preparing for a career as instructors in schools and colleges. Mr. Garrison states:

"It has been urged for the past five years that some action be taken on this matter, but Harvard has stood still while nearly every small college in the country has moved ahead. The winning of games and bringing home the championship to the University gives us much joy. Athletic organizations and efficiency is worth while and should not be and has not been neglected; but the boys who do not know the joy of running, jumping, or being physically active on the green grass under the blue sky, should be given a chance to learn what all that means. Those who are studying to be educators should be given this help, in order that they may get out of and put the most into their work."

"During the last fifteen years there has come a demand from public and private schools for trained teachers who could also take general charge of athletics. Failing to find men who understood the athletic problems from a broad study of them, they have generally accepted men who have been skillful football or baseball players or track athletes. The Appointments Office at Harvard is steadily receiving calls for men who can combine with good scholarship a general knowledge of athletics and physical education. The added duties in athletics command from $200 to $600 additional salary. Harvard today does not qualify men to fill such places, except through study in the Summer School of Physical Education. What is needed is a course of lectures and instructions which would give teachers a basis in the fundamentals of football, basketball and all other sports and teach them the relative value of all sports for growing boys. Instruction should also be given in training methods, in diet, and in general athletic organization and administration."

SPORT INVASION
The tide of sport invasion has again turned toward these shores. Several English and French professional golfers will be seen in action at the United States open championships scheduled for Brookline, Mass., September 17-18. The women's national championship to be played at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., October 13-14, is also expected to attract several of England's best women golfers, including possibly the little Scotswoman, Edwina Sargent, who is one of the best professional golfers in the world.

German yachtsmen with their sloop boats will start the autumn international regatta at Marblehead early in September. The small racing craft are now being tried out at the scene of the coming races, and judging from the reports of the early trials, the contest for the trophy should prove as interesting to the amateur sailors as the golfing will be to the devotees of the ancient and honorable game. At Camp Perry the expert riflemen of the world will also be matching their skill as marksmen during the opening days of the regatta, all of which will afford a fitting climax to a year which has proved unusually productive of international sporting competitions.

CRANDALL WINS GAME WITH ROCKFORD TEAM

Milton College Twirler Wins Game Against City Team With Leaguers By Six to Three Score.

Crاندall, star hurler of the Janesville Cardinals and Milton college added another scalp to his belt Thursday afternoon when he pitched a winning game with the Rockford Illinois Wisconsin-Illinois league team against the city team by a six to three score. The city leaguers were only able to corral five hits off his delivery and he sent down nine sluggers with strike outs. The Rockford team were impressed with the Milton boy's showing and stated that he gave promise of being worthy of coaching and development.

Crاندall is billed to twirl against the famed Rockville White Sox team when the local Cardinals cross bats with the village nine Sunday afternoon. The largest crowd of the year is expected as two of the crack pitchers of southern Wisconsin will oppose each other.

12,500 Mines in the United States.

The Engineering and Mining Journal says there are about 6,500 coal mines in the United States and about 6,000 metal mines producing and developing. There are nine copper refineries and 45 smelters, 28 lead smelters works, 28 zinc and 314 iron. There are 159 open-hearth steel works and 30 Bessemer works.

EXPECTED TO KEEP GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

Jerome D. Travers.

Jerome D. Travers, the present national golf champion, will undoubtedly go into the championship tournament the first week in September a heavy favorite. Since he won at Wheaton last year, and took the title for the third time, having previously held it in 1907 and 1908, he has played some remarkable golf. This season he has been winning the low score medal in nearly every tournament he has entered.

JANESVILLE ON MAP IN RACING CIRCLES

HORSEMEN AND PUBLIC COMBINE TO MAKE MEETING MOST SUCCESSFUL.

FINE EVENTS FRIDAY

Ethel McKee Runs Sensational Race In 2:30 Class Trot—Wainon Makes Fine Showing in Three Year Old Class.

Horsemen and race fans are today agreeing that Janesville's place in racing circles of Wisconsin and the northwest is now secure as the result of the successful meeting which closed yesterday's program, and which marked the auspicious inauguration of the Wisconsin Grand Circuit.

Even the old days in Janesville's history as a light harness center, which are often recalled by older residents who insist that the present is an era of decadence, have lost their glamour in the face of the unsurpassed field of horses which competed on the driving association track during the past three days, and in face of the enthusiasm which was evident on every hand.

To Secretary C. S. Putnam and President John C. Nichols of the local association, as well as to the other members of the board of directors, which includes Edward Amerpohl, Harry Nowlan, John Soultman, Frank P. Crook and John Sheridan is due credit for the excellent showing made and the manner in which the events were conducted. They have worked diligently to revive the interest in horse racing in this section and their efforts have been satisfactorily rewarded. They have also been responsible in large measure for the establishment of the Wisconsin circuit.

Horsemen today congratulated Secretary Putnam on the success of the local races, declaring it was one of the best conducted meetings they had ever attended. They assured him that the popularity of the Janesville tracks had been firmly established and predicted that next year's racing season would bring a larger field of horses to try out at the driving park association grounds. The horsemen were unanimous in their praise of the local meet.

Friday's card was in every way equal to Wednesday's or Thursday's offerings. The first heat of the 2:30 class trot was without doubt one of the prettiest races that anyone would care to witness. On the home stretch long wait on the outside of the track she led on the home stretch by several feet over Primbellini who was second.

In the two following heats she was not pushed so hard and made better time in both. She is a most promising mare, she is owned by J. J. Clark of Minneapolis.

There was considerable interest in the three year old trot on account of the fact that two local horses, American Rex and Angus Axworthy, were entered. In this event went to Wainon, a classy roan colt owned by Bronson and Parkinson of Portage, who took two successive heats. Margaret Helm one of Peuelon's horses, took second money and pushed Wainon hard in both heats. Angus Axworthy who secured third money, was really deserving of a better place, but was driven from his feet on several crucial moments.

Another good race was the 2:13 class pace which was won by Marie W., a fine brown mare owned by Paul Hussin of Stevens Point. She was pushed hard in the first heat by Logan and Dan Mack, who were both fast animals. The little mare was too fast for them, however, and with skillful driving took the three heats and the honors.

All three winners were given enthusiastic applause as they passed the grandstand at the end of each heat. Interest in the events ran high and everyone was well pleased. It is safe to predict that there will be many Janesville people at the Rock county fair races at Evansville next week as many of the horses which competed here are entered there. The Evansville program is the second of the Wisconsin circuit meetings.

Following are the results of Friday's events:

LAST YEAR'S CROP OF GRADUATES FROM THE SOUTHERN LEAGUE VERY PUNK; BUT "OLD GUARD" FROM DIXIE STILL GOES STRONG

Last year's graduates from the southern leagues are going very, very poor this season. But the old-time graduates from southern baseball are going just as strong as ever. In the American league Ty Cobb and Ty Cobb are pounding the ball something awful. Tris Speaker, also a southern product, is fourth from the top of the column with a batting average of .367. Derill Pratt, with the lowly St. Louis Browns, is hitting almost at a .300 clip. In the National league Nap Rucker and other old grade from the south are going strong.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

The standard of honesty is so flexible that it accommodates itself to all sorts of conditions, and covers a multitude of sins. The man whose word is considered as good as his bond, and who holds the record for prayer meeting attendance does not always hesitate to settle with the conductor on the train, and satisfies his conscience with the argument that a railroad is a soulless corporation.

The man turned loose to put a valuation on his property for purposes of taxation, seldom over-estimates its value, and if he can beat the assessment, "the still small voice" is so near silent, that it falls to annoy him.

The most of us obey the laws of the land, not because we fear them, but because we respect them, and yet ignore the larger code of unwritten laws, which have to do with questions of honesty and morality.

The old command, "Thou shalt not steal," of broad significance than the criminal code, and many of us break it every day knowing that we will never be called to account before any court of justice.

Attention was called, the other day, to a gang of workmen, employed at a way station, in making improvements. The thought which seemed to impress them, was, that the job would last longer if they took life easy. They were stealing time, for which good money was paid them, by the same soulless corporation which tempted the honest passenger to compound a felony with the honest conductor.

The same conditions prevail, to large extent, throughout the industrial world, and many failures result from thefts of this kind. The man who "soldiers" on his job, is as much a thief, as the man who picks your pocket, yet he is not considered a law-breaker.

The governor of New York was impeached the other day because he was accused of appropriating campaign funds for private speculation. Had the money, said to have been invested in Wall street, proved a lucky venture, as he supposed it would, no one would have been the wiser.

Many of us learn by experience, as Governor Sulzer has learned to his sorrow, that honesty is the best policy, and the fear of being found out keeps some of us in the straight and narrow path.

The question of honesty is broader than church or creed. The first crime of record was the result of disobedience, and the first man and woman paid the penalty for being dishonest. From that day to the present, coming down through the centuries, every race in every land has had a moral code with honesty as a prominent feature.

The age in which we live is the advanced age of civilization, enjoying intelligence of high degree, and possessing a conscience quickened by the influence of many centuries of a Christian dispensation.

In our own land it is an open question as to whether our standard of morals has kept pace with the rapidly developing age.

There was a time when the church and the Sabbath commanded respect, by all classes of people, but today the sanctity of both is but lightly regarded. Our adopted citizenship has increased in numbers, far more rapidly than our native born, and the customs of the old world have crowded out many of our well established usages.

Scattered over the land, especially in the east and north, are thousands of churches which are practically deserted for lack of pastors, and thousands more which are struggling for existence, while the day of rest is no longer considered a holy day, by a multitude of people.

We have arrived at a point in our history as a nation when we preach morality, and ignore to large extent the Christian faith of the fathers.

Personal liberty is the popular creed, and the license which it invites is a menace to public and private morality.

Communities are expressions of individual units, and the standard of public morals is never brighter than the average standard in private life. We flatter ourselves as a city that law and order won in the late election, but the margin was so small that there is as much occasion for alarm as for congratulation.

When the fact is considered that some four hundred new voters were sworn in, mainly by the opposition, and that the claim is made that two hundred more might have been secured had it been considered necessary, there is every reason to fear that public dishonesty scored heavily.

It is to be hoped, in the interests of future public welfare, that no effort will be spared to investigate conditions which existed on election day, and if any guilty parties are found, that they will be severely dealt with.

The contest was not a political contest. The issue was a moral issue, pure and simple, and nothing but heroic work saved the city from disgrace, which would have haunted it for years to come.

There has been running through the Saturday Evening Post a story called "The Price of Place," which has to do with political conditions which existed in this country for many years.

The methods employed in influencing elections, are clearly brought out, and the portrayal of the leading character is so true to life, that it is easy to understand how men in public life are tempted to sacrifice honesty and honor, in playing the game of politics.

But the story of the last city election will never be written, and the people may never understand why more votes were cast than at any previous election. It is a story which has to do with public morality, as well as with public and personal honesty.

The statement is often made, that more than honesty is necessary to success in life, and it is true, yet the fact remains that the building of a life, with honesty left out always means failure.

What we need as a people today is more of the old fashioned brand of plain honesty, which recognizes honesty with ourselves, as well as with our fellow men.

Not what we profess, but what we possess. Not what we say, but what we do, are the things which count.

The standard of right and wrong, to the individual, is a question of judgment, as well as conscience, and the latter may not trouble us very much, if the former has been warped by environment.

It is possible for the wrong to seem right, under some conditions, and this is especially true on questions which are vital to the welfare of community life.

The man who votes to abolish the Sabbath and extend to every man the personal liberty which makes him a law unto himself, may do so conscientiously, but that does not make a wrong, right.

The forces of good and evil have always contended for the mastery, both in private and public life, and the warfare was never waged more vigorously than today.

A clean and wholesome city means a clean and wholesome constituency, where honesty is regarded as a positive virtue. Such a city we may have, if we will.

SCRIPTURE

The face of the Lord is against them that do evil, to cut off the remembrance of them from the earth. The righteous cry, and the Lord heareth, and delivereth them out of all their troubles.

The Lord is nigh unto them that are of a broken heart; and saveth such as be of a contrite spirit.

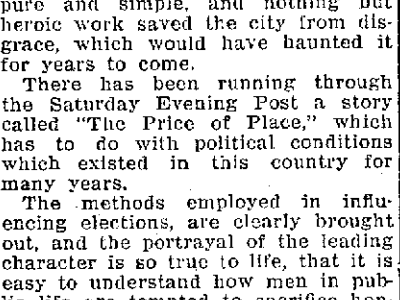

Many are the afflictions of the righteous; but the Lord delivereth him out of them all.

He keepeth all his bones: not one of them is broken.

Evil shall slay the wicked: and they shall be desolate.

The Lord redeemeth the soul of his servants: and none of them that trust in him shall be desolate.

Heart to Heart Talks

By JAMES A. EDGERTON

GOOD WILL.

Love rules the world. War, the conqueror, finally meets his own conqueror. The lion of the earth and the lamb of God lie down together, and the lamb is master. Nonresistance, the turning of good for evil, is triumphing over force and violence. The battle songs are dying, and the hymns of peace are swelling up to the very throne. The brute in us grows feeble, and the God in us grows stronger with the passage of the years.

The life and death of the Nazarene are not forgotten, and the gospel of good will was not in vain. The song sung by the angels over Bethlehem 1,900 years ago is today re-echoed by angels and men over the whole earth.

The dawn gives place to the sunrise. The children of men look over into the promised land of brotherhood. From the heavens above to the earth beneath the souls on both sides of the seeming veil of death are vibrant to the thought of universal love.

At last, like little children, we are coming to see. Love is the all in all. It conquers hate, it conquers war, it conquers sin, it conquers wrong, it conquers us, and only when we are fully conquered by it do we really begin to live.

Love ever gives itself, never exacts. It ever serves, never enslaves. It does good, asking no return. It seeks to bless its objects and gains its own happiness in the happiness of the one beloved. It denies not itself. It flows out to all creatures. It is good will. It is comradeship. It is glad in the prosperity and well being of others. It is innocent, trusting and joyous. It is good cheer in the heart, laughter on the lips and sunshine in the life. It wanders not in well doing and falls not at rebuffs. It is as diffusive as light, as imperceptible, as life giving, as all conquering. The soul that has it has solved the riddle of the sphinx and found the key to heaven.

Love is the divine law of life.

When the Master would test one of his disciples he did not propound a catechism or a creed. He said, "Lovest thou me?"

When asked as to the commandments he gave two, and love is the burden of both—love thy God and love thy neighbor.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Ceylon Bullock Carts Passing.

Owing to heavy mortality among the bullocks used for transporting plantation products in Ceylon, due to rinderpest and foot-and-mouth disease, a revolution seems to be impending in this island, in the substitution of motor lorries for the picturesque but slow and cumbersome bullock carts which for centuries have been the chief means of conveying goods in Ceylon.

A good way to make your candles last longer than usual is the following, says the Montreal Star: Hold each candle by the wick and give it a coat of white varnish. Then lay candles away for a day or so to harden. The varnish prevents the grease from running and preserves the life of the candle many hours.

My dear Sir:—

DISCLAIM MALICIOUS INJURY ON PROPERTY

James Cheeseman and Matthew Taylor plead "Not Guilty to Charge—"

James Cheeseman and Matthew Taylor plead "not guilty" in the municipal court to wilful and malicious injury of the property of Mrs. Helen Tift.

Six hundred dollars bail was required of each, and as they were not able to provide it they were committed to the county jail to await their trial.

The action grew out of a fracas last evening. Taylor and Cheeseman, it is alleged, came to the Tift store prepared to start an argument with the sons of Mrs. Tift, one of whom, it is said, made complaint a short time ago.

Mrs. Tift, who is a woman of Buob brewer, on Sunday anticipated trouble and locked the front door. Taylor and Cheeseman, it is alleged, then tried to break down the door.

The sons and Mrs. Tift then appeared on the scene and changed blows with the would-be invaders, with the result that when they appeared before Judge Fifield this morning, their faces showed abundant evidences of battle.

The police were promptly notified that a fight was in progress and Patrolmen Sam Brown, Harry Smith and Philo Kemp, hurried to the battleground and placed them under arrest. Taylor, the police report, acted in a violent and frantic manner for some time after he was locked up.

MAKE QUICK CAPTURE OF PURSE SNATCHER

Woman Giving Name of Mrs. Martha Parks Arrested After Theft at Northwestern Station.

Hardly had the scene of the purse snatchers belonging to Mrs. Henry Wolfrum of Appleton, while it was inadvertently left lying on a seat at the Northwestern station, a woman giving her name as Mrs. Martha Parks, but who is known to be Mrs. Martha Winkler of Beloit, was placed under arrest by Patrolman Smith.

After being taken to the station and questioned closely she confessed to the theft and returned the money.

Mr. and Mrs. Wolfrum and two children, who are of Beloit, were in the city while on their way home from a visit in Appleton. They arrived early in the afternoon and were waiting at the station to make train connections when Mrs. Wolfrum went into the lavatory, leaving her purse unguarded.

As soon as she returned to the waiting room she missed it and two women there noticed that a third woman had picked it up, carried it into the wash-room, came out without it and left. Mrs. Wolfrum informed her husband who was in the men's waiting room, where the cook place, and gave him a description of the suspected woman.

He soon caught sight of her and followed her until near the Milwaukee street bridge where he met Patrolman Harry Smith, who was requested to place her under arrest.

The purse which she took was found hidden in the station wash-room. Mrs. Martha Winkler has been employed as second cook at a local hotel and had intended to go to Sharon today.

CRASHES INTO TREE WITH AN AUTOMOBILE

Mr. and Mrs. George Turk Have Close Escape From Injury—Accident Caused by Misaimove.

Mr. and Mrs. George Turk, residing at 303 Clark street, had a close escape from serious injury this morning when their automobile mounted the high curb and horse block and crashed head-on into a large tree just south of the drinking fountain on the south Main street side of the Court House Park.

The left hand wheel was demolished but the tire left intact, the left front tire exploded, and the radiator slightly bent. The accident was caused by a misaimove on the part of Mr. Turk who but recently purchased the car and is a novice at motoring.

He coasted down Court street hill and threw in his clutch when he reached the bottom. Here he found it necessary to swing around some buggies northward bound and in so doing he accidentally opened the throttle to a point that with slight headway would give it thirty miles an hour speed. In less time that it takes to tell it the machine had jumped the curb and crashed into the tree.

Further progress in the preliminary work for the construction of the Milwaukee street bridge was made this morning when the great steam derrick at the west approach, weighing many tons, was moved forward to near the center of the river, where it will be used to drive piles for the south foot-bridge. As soon as this work is completed the existing walk on the north side of the old bridge will be closed and torn out as there is not room for the derrick to work between it and the new south side walk. The temporary foot-bridge on the north side will be constructed farther up stream so as to be safely out of the way. Linemen continued today to prepare for carrying telephone cables over the river and as soon as these are connected with the system the remaining wires and poles will be removed.

There will be an ice cream social on the Congregational lawn tonight. Ice cream and cake, 10c; cones, 5c. Carter and Menzies' orchestra will play during the evening.

ANOTHER PLACE

BY ELSIE ENDICOTT.

HEY are just lovely! O, I should think they should make her happy!"

The girl poised herself against the edge of the counter, and held up a tiara of diamonds for the inspection of her customer, as they sparred against the smooth white skin of her hand. The customer shook his head doubtfully.

"She is one of those women who have been surprised with such things as these," he said, "and it isn't easy to make her happy that way."

"You see," he went on, leaning against the other side of the counter, and dropping into a confidential tone—"she is my fiancée—one of those old standing engagements—and since I have been out in this big western country, I haven't seen much of her. I am going on there tomorrow, and want to take something and fix matters up, one way or the other."

"These are first water, every stone, you say? And the design—well I'll take your word for that. Would you mind sticking it up there in your hair, for a second, so that I can get the effect?" he asked, hesitatingly.

The girl lifted the sparkling ornament with a little embarrassed flush, and fastened it in her shiny puff of gold brown hair. The man turned his head to one side, and took a critical glance at the trim little figure in its neatly-fitting black gown, the pretty face and soft, large eyes, and forgot to look at the diamonds.

The girl blushed scarlet, and lifted it off, as she said in a hurt tone:

"Of course you can't judge this" way—I am not dressed to show it off; it will look quite differently on your fiancée!"

MISS ALLEN.

"She will be dressed to show it off, all right," he answered absently.

"and yes, she is handsome," he added. "But I don't like furbelows and laces, and diamonds either, for that matter; and would you mind my telling you that I was admiring that little black frock you have on, with the white band in the neck, so much, that I forgot about the diamonds?"

The girl blushed again, but somehow there was a straightforward sincerity in the compliment that made her know her customer meant no impertinence, and she answered modestly:

"Laces and furbelows are not exactly to my taste, either, but I shouldn't object to something a little finer."

Then she grew confidential, too, and told him that the black gown she wore was mourning for her father, who had died and left her all alone in the world with an invalid mother to support. She had little time to think of dress or anything of that kind, as she had to work hard to give her mother the comforts she needed, and spent most of her spare time trying to cheer and make her happy.

She was afraid she would not have her long, and she would be quite alone in the world. Then she brushed away the tears and began to talk of the merits of the diamonds.

A short time after, the man went out of the store with the handsome ornament done in a neat little package, and the girl went on waiting upon her other customers. But somehow, she thought many times of the man who had bought the tiara, and found herself wondering if his fiancée were pleased with the gift, and if he had fixed up matters with her.

She thought the girl must be hard to please if she didn't allow him to fix matters up in her favor; but somehow, although he said she was handsome, she didn't believe he was altogether pleased with her. He made arrangements to return the tiara if it didn't suit, and she wondered if he would bring it back, and for some unaccountable reason, she hoped he would.

A week had passed, and he had not come, and then something happened to put everything else out of her head for the time.

The manager called her to his desk one morning and told her she would not need her after that day. She had done nothing to displease him, he said, but they had to reduce their force, and a member of his own family was to take her place. As she was about to leave the desk, he called her back, and handing her an extra check, said hurriedly:

"Here is a check for $10, Miss Allen; we are in the habit of paying the clerks a percent on such large sales as the tiara you sold last week, and I think this will about cover your sale."

She thanked him and took the check, but suddenly remembering something, turned and handed it back to him.

"The gentleman arranged to bring the tiara back if it didn't suit, and I can't take this!" she said with a little sob, and leaving him before he had time to reply, she went back to her place and began to arrange the jewel-cases behind her counter.

Her whole month's wages would have to go for the doctor's bills for her sick mother. "And the $10 would pay the rent until I can get another place!"

She sobbed, and just then a little cough attracted her attention, and she hurriedly dried her eyes and turned to wait on a customer. It was the man who bought the tiara. He smiled and laid down a little package on the counter.

"You see, I have brought it back, as it didn't suit her," he announced, not looking in the least downcast about it.

"O, I am sorry—that is, I wouldn't have been a little while ago, but now—" The girl hesitated, and looked up in fearful confusion at the man who bent his eyes questioningly upon her until she attempted to explain.

"I didn't mean to tell you, but now it has slipped out. I will have to say I am sorry you brought the tiara back because I have just lost my place, and they were to give me a percent on this sale which I need very much, until I can get something else to do."

The man made a little gesture of relief, and smiled good-humoredly.

"I am sorry you are to lose your place," he said, "but I can't help being glad the tiara didn't suit, because nothing else did. As to your place—I have been thinking a great deal about you lately, and I came here to offer you another place. All you will have to do is to say that you will take it."

The girl flushed with sudden happiness. "O, how kind you are! Of course I will take it, for I believe I can trust you, and know that you will do the right thing by me!" She looked up into his eyes.

"Well, you haven't heard what kind of place it is you will have to fill, yet," he answered, leaning over the counter.

"You see," he went on, "I happen to want a young woman myself, just answering your description, and if you consent to come with me you will have to make a solemn vow never to leave me for anybody else under the shining stars, and you will have to put up with all my crankiness, and wear that little black frock and white neckband all the time, and ever so many things!"

He stopped and looked across the counter at the girl who dropped her eyes as a sudden wild suspicion of the color over her face and neck into the very roots of her hair.

"But I will try to make the place easy for you," he said, leaning near her, and speaking very tenderly.

"I have made a good deal of money, and I have a great big house and lots of servants, and a comfortable nook for your sick mother. All I need is a good, sensible little woman like you to make it cheerful and bright for me, and help me enjoy the things I have worked for."

"I went to New York for the woman I told you about, but I saw she wasn't the kind I wanted and I didn't suit her, so we agreed to give each other up. And then I began to think of the little girl who sold me the tiara and I believed she would be just the kind of a woman I have always wanted. I came to ask her to be my wife!"

The girl could not speak for a few minutes, then with a little impulsive gesture, she exclaimed:

"O, I have read beautiful novels, where such things as this have happened, but it was always that the rich hero was old and ugly, and the heroine would take him because she was poor, and not because—" She paused confusedly.

"She loved him?" he ventured questioning her with a tender, smiling countenance. "Well, I am not old or very ugly," he went on, "and I am not exactly a hero, but somehow there is only one thing I have been afraid of in my little heroine, is she different from the book-kind in this respect?"

"I believe she is, and I think he is a hero, too, even if he is not old and ugly!" she added with a rapturous smile.

First Use of Tobacco.

The cigar has a long history. Tobacco may have been used in cigar form before it was burned in pipes, snuffed as snuff or taken as a "quid," but on this point there is no proof. Two of the sailors under Columbus on the first voyage reported that they had seen natives of the new-found world with firebrands in their mouths and with smoke issuing from their lips.

Bigger point for point Better dollar for dollar

THE 1914 Overland is the most wonderful car of the new season. And the price is reduced again.

The motor is more powerful; the wheelbase is longer; the tonneau is larger; the equipment is more complete, better and costlier than ever. In every respect Overland value has been increased while the price has been decreased.

The manufacturers have turned their enormous facilities over to the building of this one model. In no other way could such value be secured.

The production has been increased to 50,000 cars. There is an even stricter practice of the well-known Overland manufacturing economies. And this means a greater car at less cost to you.

So finely drawn is the big 1914 Overland production plan, that 50,000 cars will be built; 10,000 men will be kept busy all the year round; every wheel of the $4,000,000 worth of most modern machinery kept in constant operation, and never a moments hesitation permitted in a plant that covers more than 100 acres of ground.

This is the way the Overland makes possible a $1200 value for $950.

Their great business is built on established standardized quality.

System is the watchword in the Overland factories—and you get the benefit.

We will have the new Model 79 Overlands on our salesroom floor in a few days. We urge you to see this new model at once. Ride in the car; feel what a difference the big 114-inch wheelbase makes; note the car's entirely changed appearance. It is neater, prettier than ever—and that means the handsomest car of the year.

The long wheelbase gives increased riding comfort.

The improved Overland motor is rated at 35 horsepower—plenty of power to give satisfying comfort and speed. Inspect the many motor refinements which make the power plant more flexible and accessible.

You'll find a most efficient and reliable electric lighting system on the new Overland. This costly addition to equipment is worthy of a $1500 car.

The new Overland body has a handsome finish—beautiful rich, dark Brewster green. The trimmings are of heavy nickel and aluminum. And the big graceful cowl dash gives to the car an appearance of dignity vainly sought in many other cars of higher price.

Examine the spacious tonneau; note the big, soft, deep and luxurious folds of upholstery. The new Overland is bigger and better; we can show you point for point where it is the best your money can buy.

You can see it in a few days.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat
BY RUTH CAMERON

THE GAME OF LIFE.

ONCE upon a time two girls who were clever, bright looking, jolly young persons, but not at all pretty, even in the eyes of their most devoted friends, became unwontedly confidential and fell to talking the situation over.

One of the girls was distinctly bitter at nature's stinginess in their direction.

"Sometimes after I've seen a particularly pretty girl," she said, "I can't get to sleep at night for envying her. It isn't just the pleasure of being admired without any effort, though goodness knows there are times when I gladly exchange any brains I have for that, but prettiness opens so many doors to you, and prejudices people in your favor right from the start. It's like an attractive show window that makes people want to come inside and see your wares."

The second girl was thoughtful. "It is a great advantage," she admitted, "but you know perfectly well that you are popular, and that you have succeeded in business without it."

"Oh yes," said the rebellious one, "I suppose I have done pretty well, and you've done better, but I know we could both have done a lot more if we had only had prettiness as well as brains."

The other girl's eyes shone with a brightness that brought her very near to the beauty she was admitting she lacked. "Somehow I don't feel that way," she said. "Of course sometimes I wish I were pretty, and then again I take the greatest pride in seeing how much I can do without it. I think it's really the most fascinating thing in the world to win in spite of odds. It's just like cards. You know it's fun to have such good hands that you can't help winning, but it's a lot more fun to win in spite of a poor hand just because you played it perfectly. I can stand having poor hands in cards. The only thing that troubles me greatly is to feel that I didn't get the most I could out of what I had. Even if I win I'm not content when I feel that I didn't play my cards just as well as I possibly could have."

"The only failure is not to have done the best you could," says Cannon Farrar.

I doubt if this young person would have realized that she was expressing the same sentiment, but wasn't she?

Life is a game. Some people have good cards and play them for half their value, and others with a mediocre hand win out. We can't all have the high cards, but we can all play those we have in the best way possible. Are you doing that? Or are you playing a slovenly game because the Great Dealer did not see fit to give you just the cards you would have liked. Which?

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS
BY MRS. THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a boy 14. Am I too young to go with the girls? (2) Would it be all right for me to keep up constant correspondence with a girl whom my mother does not know? (3) Please give me a good recipe for making ice cream from cow's milk.

YOUNG BOY.

(1)—I think you are too young to be thinking of girls except as playmates. They will only laugh at you if they think you are sentimental about them.

(2)—It would be better to tell your mother about it, my boy. I suppose it is just a friendly correspondence that you wouldn't be ashamed to tell your mother about. If I were you I would try to look upon her as a mother and make her feel that she is. Talk over things with her. Tell her about the boys you know and ask her if you can entertain some of your young friends, both boys and girls, at home. I am sure she wants you to know only nice boys, so that you may fall in love with one who will make a good husband.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young lady 18 years old. My mother has been dead ever since I was six months old. My sisters have raised me. I tried to mind them and be a perfect lady. My father married the second time. I could love her if she loved me. Of course she is not mean to me herself, but she keeps my father from being good to me and letting me enjoy life.

There is no harm in a girl that can behave herself to go out to the show with a nice young man a few times, and let them call on Sunday night. Why my father can't trust me out with the boys is more than I can see. But step-mothers are nothing like our own mothers, you know. Now, write to me just like a mother.

Very well, my dear, I will write to you just like a mother. I doubt if your father is influenced by your stepmother. He probably still looks upon you as his baby girl and can't bear to think that some man will come along and carry you away from him. You see, he loves you so much he doesn't want to lose you.

Your stepmother probably loves you, too, but you must know that she is in a very difficult position. She may think you don't like her and if you haven't been very sweet and considerate to her, just as you would be to your own mother, she may be very unhappy. If I were you I would try to look upon her as a mother and make her feel that she is. Talk over things with her. Tell her about the boys you know and ask her if you can entertain some of your young friends, both boys and girls, at home. I am sure she wants you to know only nice boys, so that you may fall in love with one who will make a good husband.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Is there anything that will make the eyebrows darker besides vaseline? I have tried it for over a year and have not succeeded. They were dark one time but I used cream on my face and turned them lighter.

BABY BLUE.

You can get an eyebrow pencil at the drug store. To darken the eyebrows, you will need to use it every time after you wash. The end of a burned match, lightly applied, will also darken the eyebrows. Don't make them too dark, or they will take away from the brilliancy of your eyes.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Will you please tell me what is the best age to get married? Do you think from eighteen to twenty years is all right?

CURLY HEAD.

It depends on the girl or the boy. Some girls are ready to become wives when they are 18; others are not ready until years later. The law in most states says a girl is old enough to marry when she is 18. To my own mind a girl should never marry under 20 unless the circumstances are exceptional.

Material—Ripe red tomatoes, thirty-six pounds; chopped onions, two pounds; large sweet peppers, one pound; vinegar, two and one-fourth pounds; salt, nine ounces; sugar, six ounces.

Directions—Of all the relishes prepared from tomatoes I think chutney is the most appetizing. If this sauce be properly made it should have a bright red color and a rather mild sweet taste. Select ripe tomatoes and after removing the skins run them through a coarse food chopper. The peppers should first have the stems and seed removed. If these are too mild a little cayenne should be added. A pound of large, sweet or Chinese peppers will add to the richness and flavor. Chop the onions. Weigh an empty, porcelain-lined or aluminum kettle and put in the mixture. The kettle can be hung over the scales from time to time during the boiling and the weight of the contents determined. I usually press out most of the juice before beginning the boiling and evaporate this down in a separate vessel, adding it to the pulp before adding the sugar or vinegar.

Boil until the juice and pulp together weigh eighteen pounds and add cider vinegar and salt. Boil further until the mixture weighs eighteen and one-half pounds; then add the sugar. Boil slowly five or ten minutes. Put into jars and seal while hot. The above quantity will yield about twenty-three pounds and will fill eighteen to twenty pint jars.

Canning Tomatoes.

The most universal method for canning tomatoes where the skins are removed by dipping them in hot water, slicing them into an aluminum kettle with a teaspoonful of salt to each quart when sliced. A peck should be cooked thirty minutes. Have the sterilized jars ready, put on rubbers, fill with fruit and seal, being sure the tops have been sterilized and that they are not turned bottom side up when removed from boiling water and to be inside with the fingers. This is a general way of canning, varying by straining out the seeds and sealing up all ready for soups.

Canning Tomatoes, No. 2.

Materials—Tomatoes, salt, boiling water.

Directions—Select tomatoes perfectly fresh and firm, and uniform in size to pass into the jars perfectly whole. Place a few tomatoes at a time in a wire basket, and dip in boiling water to loosen the skins. Sterilize the jars as previously directed and fill with tomatoes, being careful not to crush them. Add one teaspoonful of salt and fill to overflowing with boiling water, screw the covers on tight at once, and stand in a kettle of boiling water, turning the burner out. Let them stand in this water until cold.

Fruits such as pared plums, grapes, soft peaches and soft pears will keep nicely put up in this manner, using, if you prefer, boiling sirup instead of boiling water. If you wish to can the tomatoes in the steam cooker fill jars to overflowing with boiling water and salt, and stand them in the cooker from twelve to fifteen minutes. Seal as directed for all other vegetables.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

A clean shell in the bottom of the salt shaker will keep the salt from caking in damp weather.

To keep cheese and bread fresh, wrap cheese in cloth that has been wrung from vinegar and it will keep fresh much longer. Cut an apple in quarters and place in the bread or cake can and see how moist and fresh it keeps the bread.

When washing white silk waists, handkerchiefs, gloves and other silk garments, they often turn yellow. To prevent this wash silk garments in white soap, and dry them in a dark place instead of out in the sunlight. This will keep them from turning yellow.

THE TABLE.

Stuffed Cabbage—Spoon the heart of a very firm cabbage, and stuff it with forcemeat made of the cropped remnants of veal, bread crumbs and sage, the whole bound together with beaten eggs. Bake an hour or an hour and a half in a covered pan with plenty of water in which you have dissolved some beef extract.

Pear Honey—When canning pears take the pear peelings, with any of the fruit that is not perfect enough for canning, cut in bits and put in the preserving kettle with water to cover. Cook until soft, then strain through a cheesecloth bag. To six cups of the juice allow four cups of sugar, and cook half an hour, skimming often. A pinch of powder.

Every Day Talks for Every Day People

By FRANCIS JOYCE KENNEDY

In cutting expenses begin with waste in the kitchen. Do not throw away a scrap of food that may be used. The cup of oatmeal left from breakfast will make delicious muffins for your luncheon. To one cup of cooked oatmeal and one and a half cups of flour, add two tablespoons of sugar, one teaspoon of baking powder, a little salt, one egg, half a cupful of sweet milk, and two tablespoons of melted butter. Bake in buttered gem pans in a hot oven.

Remember when making corn fritters to thicken the batter with bread crumbs instead of flour.

Use dried pieces of cheese by putting a layer of cheese in a well-buttered tin and covering with a soft short cake (or biscuit) batter. Bake in a quick oven. Save your sour milk for pot cheese. Add to it some chives and moisten with a little cream. This makes a delicious sandwich filling, or it may be made into balls to be served on lettuce leaves.

Another good sandwich filling is made from prunes left over from dessert. Chop fine with half the quantity of English walnuts. Add a little lemon juice and powdered sugar.

Keep a package of marshmallows on hand so that one may be placed in each cup of whipped cream. They are as good as whipped cream. Do not forget the package of bouillon cubes and a jar of beef extract for the emergency shelf.

The KITCHEN CABINET

NEVER hear more than one kind of trouble at a time. Some people hear three—all they have now, and they ever had and all they expect to have.

GENERAL HINTS.

If the sweet peas, cucumber vines and rose bushes are infested with the ubiquitous bugs and lice which destroy the plants, use the following spray:

Melt a third of a bar of ivory soap, add a teaspoonful of kerosene and eight quarts of water. Use this in the sprayer and spray everything that needs it, as it is a universal killer.

A Famous Cholera Cure.—Mix together a fourth of a teaspoonful of soda, the same of ginger, fifteen drops of peppermint, add to a glass of hot water. Take a glass of this every three hours.

A Splendid Lotion for Tan.—When preparing cottage cheese, save the whey, and in this cook a good-sized cucumber, peeling and all; cut it in slices before cooking, let stand until cool, strain and add a tablespoonful of alcohol and a teaspoonful of benzoin, two drops of oil of rose. There should be a cupful of the whey and cucumber juice.

A fine shampoo for dark hair is the well-beaten yolk of an egg. Rub it well into the scalp and rinse with several waters. The rinsing of the hair is the important point to have well done. Add a few drops of any desired perfume to the rinsing water and a delicate odor will remain in your tresses for a week. White hair should be rinsed in water quite well blueed with bluing.

When buying grape fruit, oranges, lemons, or in fact any large fruit, weigh them in the hands, as the heavier ones are most profitable, are more full of juice.

Carry some sheets of asbestos paper with you when camping; they may be rolled into cone shaped dishes, set point down into the camp fire and will hold any vegetables to be baked, without being troubled with ashes.

Keeping the feet from the floor of the car when riding on the steam cars will relieve car sickness. Support them on a cushion or bag. The vibration of the car causes the illness.

A folding coat hanger is a great convenience to use when traveling. The paper bag which the porter gives you to cover your hat may be used to cover a coat, at least the upper part of it. Silt the bag at the bottom and put the hook of the hanger through that.

The recent announcement of the engagement of the Duchess of Fife to Prince Arthur of Connaught may be followed soon by another announcement—that of the betrothal of the Duchess' sister, Princess Maud. The betrothed Duchess is the elder daughter of the late Duke of Fife and Princess Louise Victoria, and was born May 17, 1891. The bridegroom-to-be is the son of the Duke of Connaught and was born January 13, 1883. He has served as a personal aid to King Edward VII and King George V.

Side Lights On The Circus Business

By
D. W. WATT

(Copyrighted)

About three weeks ago news was received of the failure of the Two Bills' Shows at Denver, Colorado. This show was the Buffalo Bill Far West and Major Lillie Far East and went under the name of The Two Bills Show, but it was really what has been known as the great Buffalo Bill Wild West, which for several years was across the water playing the different countries in Europe. The show made money in Europe and came back to this country and it was only this last spring that it really began to look as though the beginning of the end had come. While they started the season with something like $35,000 of indebtedness, this was nothing for a great show like that. But a show of this magnitude must either make or lose money and very fast at that.

In Philadelphia, where the show opened, the weather conditions were bad for the two weeks and from there they went to Madison Square Garden in New York where they again encountered bad weather and consequently small receipts. Later on in the season when the show opened in Chicago for nine days the extreme heat made it impossible for people to attend the show and this was another financial failure.

And so it was that the great show kept on losing money until Denver was reached where the creditors took charge of the show and where in the near future it will be closed out at auction.

This is certainly a hard blow for Col. Cody. The show has been the pride of his life for many years and as he is now seventy-five years old it is a question whether he can ever make a show together again or not. After Col. Cody saw that the end had come the one thing that seemed to grieve him most was that there were three or four weeks' back salary to the people, many of them who had been with him for years. He told his old friend Major Burke, who accompanied him back to Cody, Wyoming, if he could only pay the people every dollar that he owed them he would not mind losing the balance of it.

But there is not one creditor of the Buffalo Bill Show today who is not satisfied that if Col. Cody ever gets on his feet again and gets to making money he will pay dollar for dollar everything that he owes.

The following, which is part of an article taken from the New York Clipper, is probably as near the truth as can possibly be gotten at the present time:

"Disaster has visited the Buffalo Bill Wild West and Pawnee Bill's Far East, and unless some sort of an agreement is reached the show will not move out of Denver. Trouble, which has been pending for some time, culminated there in the attachment of the show for $66,000 by the United States Printing and Lithographic Company and as the show owners have not furnished the bond, amounting to double that of the attachments, the organization cannot move.

A second attachment, supplementing the one mentioned, for $20,000, filed in behalf of H. H. Tammen and P. G. Bonfils, has proved an additional anchorage to the show, and there seems little likelihood of its continuing.

Commissioner Nisbett has placed deputies in charge of the show property, and a disagreement between the two showmen owners presages a dissolution of partnership. A number of the advance dates have been cancelled and every move points to a definite closing.

"The Two Bills' Shows has been unfortunate this season since its opening in Philadelphia. In that city cold weather caused poor attendance. The New York engagement, which was following, was most unprofitable and, in fact, in the majority of the big city dates along their route the show has not made money. In many of the one night stand business has been big, but the one nighters could hardly make up the losses met with in the big cities.

"With a show as big as the Two Bills there seems to be any half way. It either is a big winner or a big loser, and when it is the latter it would take the resources of a multi-millionaire to tide it over the shoals.

"The Denver Post of July 22, states the case authoritatively as follows: "The attachment Monday night, in Denver, of the Buffalo Bill and Pawnee Bill Shows by the United States Printing and Lithographic Company, was taken as much in the interests of Buffalo Bill as it was in the interests of the printing and lithographic company, according to a statement made in Denver today by Adolph Marks, of Chicago, general counsel of the United States Printing and Lithographic Company at Cincinnati, Ohio.

"As general counsel for the United States Printing and Lithographic Company, I can say that we have the friendliest feelings for Colonel William Cody. Col. Cody is an honest man. If it is possible for a man to be too honest then Col. Cody is that man. When Col. Cody returned to America from his last great tour of Europe, he paid voluntarily to the Bailey estate the sum of $390,000, although the estate had not the scratch of a penny upon which to claim that debt. But Cody knew that he owed the money and Cody paid it on his own volition. So my company believe in Col. Cody and if Col. Cody had his way, there would be no attachment on the show now. But Cody's name has been tied by which he seems to have decided over all his property to his present partner, Major Lillie—the Pawnee Bill of this private show combination.

"Here are the facts in the case. In December the United States Printing and Lithographic Company entered into a joint and several contracts with Colonel Cody and Major Lillie for the printing of their posters and lithographic matter and programs and date bills for the season of 1913. It was estimated that the printing would amount in the season to about $500,000. At that time my company held notes to the value of $16,000 from the Buffalo Bill-Pawnee Bill Show, which notes matured in April and May of this year, and which notes were endorsed by Major Lillie.

"Now then, up to the beginning of July of this year, my company had instructed me to attach the show, which came to Chicago at that time. I prepared to attach, but Major Lillie saw me and asked for time. Lillie promised to send me $10,000 on account of the $60,000 if we would let the show go unattached and continue on for about two more weeks. This I agreed to do, although Lillie's note for $10,000 on account of the printing for the previous season was in default. We felt friendly to Colonel Cody and didn't want to embarrass him. After agreeing to that extension of time with Lillie we lent the show printing to the value of $12,000 and that brought the total indebtedness of the Cody-Lillie show to the printing company—for this present season—to more than $16,000. And not one cent had been paid on that account. However, we did not attach the show and the show went away from there on the tour that brought it to Denver last Sunday.

"Now, then, between leaving Chicago that the receipts of the show made that the receipts of the show were at least $20,000 and yet Lillie had not sent us a dollar on account of his indebtedness. Therefore, in view of that default of Lillie's I instructed Charles H. Radmon and John T. Bottom, the attorneys who represent the United States Printing and Lithographic Company in Denver, to take such measures as they thought necessary here to protect my company.

"I reached Denver myself Monday morning and had a conference. Lillie admitted his default and asked me that we do nothing until another conference which he asked for on Tuesday. But that delay we refused to agree to because it would have given Lillie the receipts for another day and evening. Therefore we attached the show and its cars, and by constructive possession the tracks on which the cars owned and used by the show are now standing. Lillie has abandoned the men with the show and thrown them upon Denver, but I have arranged for their feeding and housing and have also arranged for the return of the Indians with the show to their reservations. Meanwhile I want to say that Lillie has refused to meet us half way in any suggestion of compromise we have made. And Lillie has got a dollar from Cody so tied up by trust deeds in the meantime that Colonel Cody is in Lillie's hands.

"Here is the situation regarding the matter: "We offered to agree to defer payment of our account for two years if Lillie would transfer to us the mortgages on the real estate he has secured from Colonel Cody. Lillie refused to do this. Lillie holds Cody's estate and Lillie seems too mean to keep it. Lillie holds from Colonel Cody a mortgage on the ranch in North Platte, which is worth at least $100,000. Lillie holds from Cody a mortgage on the hotel owned by Cody in Cody, Wyoming. That hotel is worth $75,000. Colonel Cody is willing to transfer these securities to our company so that the show may be released to finish the season, but Lillie point blank refuses to make any such transfer, and our only resource, therefore, was attachment.

"Now, then, let me say something concerning the connection of the Buffalo Bill-Pawnee Bill shows. At the beginning of this season Mr. Bonfils and Mrs. Tammen loaned to Colonel Cody and Major Lillie the sum of $20,000, with which to start the season. That loan is now over due. But Mr. Bonfils and Mr. Tammen have made no attempt of any kind to embarrass Colonel Cody and his partner because of default on that loan and they have not interfered in any way with the legal processes by which I was compelled to protect my company. They have been broad-minded and generous throughout. Now, however, and quite naturally Messrs Bonfils and Tammen are protecting their own interests, irrespective of anybody else's.

The Indians have been sent back to the reservations. The animals are being carefully looked after at the Sellers' Hotel. The performers who are stranded in Denver have begun suits through various Denver attorneys for amounts owing them. All employees thus stranded have been cared for by the sheriff, the cook tent being kept open to accommodate these people.

The Salvation of Children—A Sermon to Parents

By REV. JAMES M. GRAY, D. D.
Dean of the Moody Bible Institute
Chicago

TEXT—"It is not the will of your Father which is in heaven that one of these little ones should perish." Matt. 18, 14.

I love Jesus because he loved little children. I love him for many other things—chiefly because he ministers to me daily of his grace through his word and spirit. But I have a peculiar feeling of love for him whenever my thoughts dwell on a little child.

"I think when I read that sweet story of old, When Jesus was here among men, How he called little children as lambs to him, I should like to have been with Him then."

In this chapter of Matthew he takes a little child and sets him in the midst of his disciples, not merely to teach those disciples a lesson in humility, but for the child's sake as well as their sake. He has something to teach them concerning the child which they never knew, and could not have known except for him. He tells them such little ones are not to be despised or set at naught, for the most transcendent of reasons, namely, that the Son of Man came into the world to save them, and that it is not the will of his Father that one of them should be lost.

Christianity and the Child.
The world cared nothing for little children before Jesus came and was cradled in a manger. In splendid Rome, childhood had no rights other than those which the sentiment of the father might fitfully concede to it. He might abandon his child or murder it as he chose. Greece set the example to Rome in this respect, since Spartan children were sometimes beaten at the altar of Diana until their life-blood ran out upon its steps. It was not until Christianity had begun to affect the Roman empire that love for little children found expression in literature, or that care for them became the custom of the great.

There is great encouragement to us Christian parents in the fact that the soul of a little child is as precious in the sight of God as that of its parent. It was Jesus who taught us this and to his holy name should be the praise. Let us act on this encouragement and bring our children to the Lord that they may be saved.

Let us remember that our children need salvation, for they were shapen in iniquity and conceived in sin. The Fifty-first Psalm teaches us this. It was not personal disobedience on their part that thus exposed them to divine judgment, but that which preceded it, that which was hereditary and common to all the race. That such sin is in their being from their very birth is proven by the lives they live when they come to moral consciousness. Are they not selfish from a very early age, and is not selfishness sin? Are they not disobedient, and is not disobedience sin? Do they not take things which belong to others? And is not this theft? Do they not covet and falsify? Do they not show wrath and hatred? And is not this the spirit of murder? There is need of the regeneration of the Holy Spirit in the child as truly as in the parent of the child.

The Responsibility of Parents.
We parents have very much to do with the salvation of our children. First of all we can set a guard about them, on the principle that "an ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure." We can keep our children innocent of many things by warding off the approach of evil. It should not be necessary for the state to make such encroachments upon the functions of the home as it is now doing.

In the second place, we can set an example to our children, an example of self-denial and piety and obedience to divine law. Will a child reverence a God who is never worshipped in its own home? Can God be exalted in the esteem of little children when his name is profanely used by their parents? Will children be likely to go to church or Sunday school whose elders seldom do so? Will they love purity where the opposite is before them in the amusements and reading matter of the household? Will they be honest, who hear money and gain continually exalted around the family table and at the fireside? Will they speak the truth who witness exaggeration and falsehood in those they are supposed to honor? In the gospels we read that parents brought their children to Christ, they did not send them, and we, by example, must do the same.

In the third place we can preach the gospel to our children and lovingly and faithfully talk with them about their sin and about the Saviour who died to take away their sin. We can urge them to confess Christ and pray for them, and better yet, pray with them that they may be saved.

Only True Liberty.

The liberty which is good is not the liberty of one gained at the expense of others, but the liberty which can be enjoyed by all who dwell together.—L. T. Hobbs

WOMAN COULD NOT WALK

She Was So Ill—Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Pentwater, Mich.—“A year ago I was very weak and the doctor said I had a serious displacement. I had backache and bearing down pains so bad that I could not sit in a chair or walk across the floor and I was in severe pain all the time. I felt discouraged as I had taken everything I could think of and was no better. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I am strong and healthy.”—Mrs. ALICE DARLING, R.F.D. No. 2, Box 77, Pentwater, Mich.

Read What Another Woman says: Peoria, Ill.—“I had such backaches that I could hardly stand on my feet. I would feel like crying out lots of times, and had such a heavy feeling in my right side. I had such terrible dull headaches every day and they would make me feel so drowsy and sleepy all the time, yet I could not sleep at night.”

“After I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a week I began to improve. My backache was less and that heavy feeling in my side went away. I continued to take the Compound and am cured.”

“You may publish this if you wish.”—Miss CLARA L. GAUWITZ, R.R. No. 4, Box 62, Peoria, Ill.

Such letters prove the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for woman's ills. Why don't you try it?

Altar Dedicated to Fortune.
In the baths of a Roman fort at present being excavated at Summerston, England, an altar has been unearthed. “Dedicated to the Goddess Fortune, by Caius Nepos, tribune.” The baths served the purpose of a club, where the men would while away their time by gambling, and the altar was no doubt dedicated by the Roman officer after a particularly fortunate coup. The inscription on the altar may lead to important historical conclusions.

A POPULAR VERDICT

Based on Evidence of Janesville People.

Grateful thousands tell it—Of weak backs made strong—Of weak kidneys made well—Urinary disorders corrected. Janesville people add their testimony.

They praise Doan's Kidney Pills. Janesville evidence is now complete.

Janesville testimony is confirmed. Reports of early relief substantiated.

Merit doubly proved by test of time.

Let a Janesville citizen speak. P. C. Samuels, grocer, 585 McKee St., Janesville, Wis., says: “I know from personal experience that Doan's Kidney Pills are all right. My kidneys didn't act as they should and I had backache and pains across my loins. I used two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and was relieved. Since then I haven't had any more backache and my kidneys have been doing their work properly. I think just as highly of Doan's Kidney Pills now as I did a few years ago when I recommended them. I haven't had any need of a kidney medicine since Doan's Kidney Pills cured me.”

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

The Sign at Six

Stewart Edward White

Author of
The Blasted Trail,
The Conjuror's House, Etc., Etc.

Illustrated by Edgar Bert Smith

Copyright 1912, The Bobbs-Merrill Company.

“Air was full of dope” most of last night from some merry little jester working a toy, home-made. He just kept repeating the same thing—something about ‘McCarthy,’ at six o'clock you shall have a sign given unto you. It works, over and over all night. Some new advertising dodge, I reckon. Didn't know but you were the McCarthy and were getting a present from some admiring constituent.”

He threw back his head and laughed, but McCarthy's ready anger rose. “Where did the stuff come from?” “Out of the fresh air,” replied the operator. “From most anywhere inside the zone of communication.”

“Couldn't you tell who sent it?” “No way. It wasn't signed. Come from quite a distance, though.”

“How can you tell that?” “You can tell by the way it sounds. Say, they ought to be a law about these amateurs cluttering up the air this way. Sometimes I got to pick my own dope out of a dozen or fifteen messages all tacking away in my head-plate at once.”

“I know the crazy slob what sent ‘em, all right, all right,” growled McCarthy. “He's nutty for fair.”

“Well, if he's nutty, I wish you'd hurry his little trip to Matteawan,” complained the operator, turning away. The boy went to his office, where he established himself behind his table-top desk. There all day he conducted a leisurely business of mysterious import, sitting where the cool autumn breeze from the river brought his refreshment.

There were two other, inner, offices to McCarthy's establishment, in which sat a private secretary and an office boy. Occasionally McCarthy, with some especial visitor, retired to one of these for a more confidential conversation. The secretary seemed always very busy; the office boy was often in the street. At noon McCarthy took lunch at a small round table in the cafe below. When he reappeared at the elevator shaft, the elevator started again verified his watch. Malachi McCarthy had but the one virtue of accuracy, and that had to do with matters of time. At five minutes of six he reached for his hat; at three minutes of six he boarded the elevator. “Runs all right today, Sam,” he remarked genially to the boy whom he had half throttled the evening before. He stood for a moment in the entrance of the building, enjoying the sight of the crowds hurrying to their cars, the elevated, the subway, and the ferries. The clang and roar of the city pleased his senses, as a vessel vibrates to its master's tone. McCarthy was feeling largely paternal as he stepped toward the corner, for to a great extent the destinies of these people were in his hands.

“Easy marks!” was his philanthropic expression of this sentiment. At the corner he stopped for a car. He glanced up at the clock at the Metropolitan tower. The bronze hand pointed to the stroke of six. As he looked, the first note of the quarter chimes rang out. The car swung the corner and headed down the street. McCarthy stepped forward. The sweet chimes ceased their fourfold phrasing, and the great bell began its spaced and solemn booming.

One!—Two!—Three!—Four!—Five! Six! McCarthy counted. At the recollection of a crazy message from the Unknown, he smiled. He stepped forward to hold up his hand at the car. Somewhat to his surprise the car had already stopped some twenty feet away. McCarthy picked his way to the car. “Wonder you wouldn't stop at a crossing,” he growled, swinging aboard. “Juice give out,” explained the motorman. McCarthy clambered aboard and sat down in a comfortably filled car. Up and down the perspective of the street could be seen other cars, also stalled. Ten minutes slipped by; then Malachi McCarthy grew impatient. With a muttered growl he rose, elbowed his way through the straphangers, and stepped to the street. A row of idle taxicabs stood in front of the Atlas Building. Into the first of these bounced McCarthy, throwing his address to the expectant chauffeur.

The man hopped down from his box, threw on the coil switch and ran to the front. He turned the engine over the compression, but no explosion followed. He repeated the effort a dozen times. Then, grasping the starting handle with a firmer grip, he “whirled” the engine—without result.

“Will you please listen, sir, and see if you hear a buzz when I turn her over?” requested the chauffeur.

“I don't hear nothing,” was the verdict.

“I'm sorry, but you'll have to take another cab,” then said the man. “My coil's gone back on me.”

McCarthy impatiently descended, entered the next taxi in line, and repeated the same experience. By now the other chauffeurs, noticing the predicament of their brethren, were anxiously and persistently at work. Not an engine answered the call of the road! A passing truck driver, grinning from ear to ear, drove slowly down the line, dealing out the ancient jests rescued for the occasion from an oblivion to which the perfection of the automobile had consigned them.

McCarthy added his mite; he was beginning to feel himself the victim of a series of nagging impertinences, which he resented after his kind.

“If,” said he, “your company would put out something on the street besides a bunch of retired grist-mills with clock dials hitched on to them, you might be able to give the public some service. I've got lots of time. Don't hurry through your afternoon exercise on my account. Just buy a lawn-mower and a chafin' watch apiece—you'd do just as well.”

By now every man had his battery box open. McCarthy left them, puzzling over the singular failure of the electrical apparatus, which is the nervous system of the modern automobile.

He turned into Fifth Avenue. An astonishing sight met his eyes. The old days had returned. The center of the long roadway, down which ordinarily a long file of the purring monsters of gasoline creep and dash, shouldering aside the few hansom and victorias remaining from a bygone age, now showed but a swinging slashing trot of horses.

Hansoms, hacks, broughams; upraised whips, whirling in signal; the spat spat of horses' hoofs; all the obsolescent vehicles that ordinarily doze in hope along the sands of the side streets; it was a gay sight of the past raised again for the moment to reality by the same mysterious blight that had shadowed the Atlas Building the night before.

McCarthy looked about him for a hansom. There was none unengaged. In fact, the boss soon determined that many others, like himself, were waiting for a chance at the first vacant one. Reluctantly he made up his mind to walk. He glanced up at the tower of the Metropolitan Building; then stared in astonishment. The hands of the great dial were still perpendicular—the hour indicated was still six o'clock!

CHAPTER IV.

Darkness and Panic.

Probably the only men in the whole of New York who accepted promptly and unquestioningly the fact that the entire electrical apparatus of the city was paralyzed were those in the newspaper offices. These capable citizens, accustomed to quick adaptations to new environments and to wide reaches of the imagination, made two or three experiments, and accepted the inevitable.

Within ten minutes the Despatch had messenger boys on tap instead of bells, bicycles instead of telephones, and a variety of lamps and candles in place of electricity. Everybody else in town was speculating why in blazes this visitation had struck them. The Despatch was out after news.

Marsden, city editor, detailed three men to dig up expert opinion on why it had all happened.

“And if the scientific men haven't any other notions, ask ‘em if it's anything to do with the earth passing through the tail of the comet,” he told them.

The rest of the staff he turned out for stories of the effects. His imagination was struck by the contemplation of a modern civilized city deprived of its nerve system.

After covering the usual police-station, theater and hotel assignments, he sent Halliwell to the bridge; Longman to the Grand Central; Kennedy, Warren and Thomas to the tubes, subways and ferries. The others he told to go out on the streets.

They saw a city of four million people stopped short on its way home to dinner! They saw a city, miles in extent, set back without preparation to a communication by messenger only! They saw a city, unprepared, blinking its way by the inadequate illuminations of a half-century gone by!

Halliwell found a packed mass of humanity at the bridge. Where ordinarily is a crush, even with incessant outgoing trains sucking away at the surplus, now was a panic—a panic the more terrible in that it was solid, sullen, inert, motionless. Women fainted, and stood unconscious, erect. Men sank slowly from sight, agonized, their faces contorted, but unheard in the dull roar of the crowd, and were seen no more. Around the edges people fought frantically to get out, others, with the blind, unreasoning, home instinct, fought as hard to get in.

The police were unavailing. They could not penetrate to break the center. Across the bridge streamed a procession of bruised and battered humanity, escaped from or cast forth by the maelstrom. The daylight was fading, and within the shields men could not see one another's faces.

Longman at the Grand Central observed a large and curious crowd that filled the building and packed the streets round about. They waited for their trains, and the twilight gathered. For ten minutes trains continued to enter the shed. This puzzled Longman, until he remembered that gravity would bring in those this side of Harlem. None went out. The waiting throng was a hotbed for rumors. Longman collected much human-interest stuff, and was quite well satisfied with his story—until he saw what it had meant elsewhere.

For in the subways and tubes the stoppage of the trains had automatically discontinued the suction ventilation. The underground thousands, in mortal terror of the non-existent third-rail danger, groped their way painfully to the stations. With inconceivable swiftness the mephitic vapors gathered. Strong men staggered fainting into the streets. When revived they told dreadful tales of stumbling over windrows of bodies there below.

Through the gathering twilight of the streets, dusky and shadowy, flitted bat-like the criminals of the underworld. What they saw, that they took. Growing bolder, they progressed from pocket-picking to holdups; from holdups to looting. The police reserves were all out; they could do little. Favored by obscurity, the thieves plundered. It would have needed a solid cordon of officers to have protected adequately the retail district. Swiftly a guerrilla warfare sprang up. Bullets whistled. Anarchy raised its snaky locks and peered red-eyed through the darkened streets of the city.

Here and there fire broke out. Men on bicycles brought in the alarms; then, as twilight thickened, men on the lights and transportation facilities resume their functions. Most of the dynamos were being inspected by puzzled experts. Here and there the blazing of a group of lights, the ringing of a bell, the response of a volt or ammeter to test, hinted to the masters of the lightnings that their rebellious steeds again answered the bit.

Within a half-hour the city's illumination again reflected softly from the haze of the autumn sky; the clang of the merry trolley, the wail of the motor's siren again smote the air.

Malachi McCarthy, having caught a ride on a friendly dray, arrived home. At eight ten his telephone bell for the first time jangled his summons. McCarthy answered it.

“I'm Slimmons, the wireless operator,” the small voice told him. “Say! There's a lot of these fool messages in the air again. You know what they said last night about six o'clock, and what happened?”

“Let's have ‘em,” growled McCarthy.

“Here she is: ‘McCarthy, will you do as I tell you? Answer. Remember the sign at six o'clock.’ It's signed ‘M.’”

“Where did that come from?” asked the boss.

“Can't tell, but somewhere a long ways off.”

“How do you know that?” “By the sound.”

“How far—about?” “Might be anywhere.”

“Can you get an answer back?” “I think so. Can't tell whether my spark will reach that far. I can send out a call for ‘M.’”

“Well, send this,” said McCarthy. “Go to hell.”

During a lull in the dinner conversation the hostess (turned to the famous traveler and author, who was the lion of the occasion, and said: “I enjoyed reading your book so much. Now, tell me honestly, did you really encounter all those wonderful adventures you narrate?”

“No, indeed,” replied the traveler in a burst of confidence. “If I had I'd never have lived to write about them.”

The sort of sentiment which the French system of marriage, de convenience, or in plain English, of married red-eyed through the darkened streets of the city.

Here and there fire broke out. Men on bicycles brought in the alarms; then, as twilight thickened, men on
